Description

EPSE 403 is a required course for students enrolled in UBC's diploma program in special education. It would also be appropriate for graduate students in education, social work, nursing, or related fields who want a basic course in developmental disabilities. Finally, teachers and others who require practical information about including students with developmental disabilities in regular classrooms will find this course useful and may enroll as unclassified students.

This online course is intended to provide educators and others with information related to supporting individuals with developmental disabilities in inclusive school and community settings. By the end of the course, you will have learned:

1. about the historical and other factors that contribute to attitudes about and services provided to people with developmental disabilities;
2. how to develop individual education plans (IEPs) and adapt/modify curricula and instruction for students with developmental disabilities in regular classrooms;
3. how to support the development of social relationships between students with disabilities and their peers; and
4. how to implement instructional, communication, and behaviour support approaches for these individuals.

Students are required to have a computer, access to high speed Internet, and a Campus Wide Login ID and password to access the website for EPSE 403. Don't have a CWL account? Register at: <http://www.cwl.ubc.ca>
